As Miletsky has stated in a series of videos produced by Stony Brook University in 2021, "This is a time, separate and apart from July 4th to focus and celebrate on the bitter part of the American experience, which cannot be forgotten about—namely slavery. It doesn't mean that they are mutually exclusive or that one negates the other, but that they both must be recognized and observed." Dr. Miletsky will also discuss the history of other, longer celebrations of emancipation in the Northeast and New England which were celebrating emancipation well before 1863—including here in New York and Long Island. Juneteenth is also now a state holiday in New York. Please register. Presented by the Huntington area libraries.

Thanks to your efforts, we have collected enough plastic to earn a NexTrex Bench, and will continue the Program with your support. In addition, we are now collecting used pens, pencils and markers for the Bic Recycling Program. Hold onto your plant pots made of plastic for July when we will be accepting those.) Keep track of our progress on these and other initiatives on our "Sustainability Initiative" webpage.
